

CLEVER SPECULATOR DUPES CONGRESSMEN

WALL STREET OPERATOR TESTIFIES TO LOBBY COMMITTEE HOW HE IMPERSONATED REPRESENTATIVES.

TELLS OF U. P. FORGERY

Declares That Company's Books Were Forged An Item of $82,000,000 in 1901 Laying Foundation for Harriman Fortune.

Washington, July 2.—David La Mar, Wall street operator and one time confidante of Russell Sage, James R. Keene, and other financiers, amazed the senate lobby committee today by stating and frankly testifying that it was he who impersonated representatives Palmer and Rindard in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass, Edward, Paul D. Cravath, Chairman Robert S. Lovett, of the Union Pacific board, and other prominent financiers telling them that Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, could do great things for them in Washington.

La Mar also astonished the committee by making a detailed charge that the Union Pacific railway books had been forged in 1901 on an item covering eighty-two million dollars, and that as one result Kuhn, Loeb and company and the late E. H. Harriman had laid the foundations of gigantic fortunes.

La Mar also finished, Paul D. Cravath, of counsel for the Union Pacific, put in a prepared statement to the committee alleging that La Mar's charge concerning the eighty-two million dollars which amount is connected with the Union Pacific surplus, was part of a bear campaign to depress Union Pacific stocks, of which the railroad's officials have had knowledge for several days.

La Mar amused, entertained and astounded the committee as he freely testified as to his impersonation of congressmen over the telephone. He did it all, he said, to impress the financiers with the abilities of his friend, Edward Lauterbach, but he stoutly denied there was ever any mention that Lauterbach should profit by legal fees.

Questioned by Senator Cummins, he said he was a Methodist and that La Mar was not his original name. He declined to give that, saying he had several names. He further denounced the plan of dissolution of the Union Pacific as agreed upon at St. Paul recently.

To Probe Mulhall Case. Representatives Nease and Shirley both introduced a resolution today for an investigation by a house committee of five into the charges of Martin M. Mulhall, concerning his relations with congressmen in his work as chief lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers and that $10,000 be appropriated for expenses.

Pleas of Not Guilty. When the house convened a general outbreak of pleas of "not guilty" to the Mulhall charges began. Representative Shirley declared that if the Mulhall charge meant that he had been influenced in any way it was a "malicious, wanton and deliberate lie." Chairman Henry of the rules committee said that he would object to the present consideration of the Shirley resolution.

This is a grave, serious matter," he said, "and the house should proceed with due deliberation. A resolution covering completely this broadside charge should be framed."

Republican leader Mann in a spirited speech said it was imperative that the house proceed at once to defend itself.

Series of Denials. Representative Webb of North Carolina denied that he was properly listed by Mulhall as one of those who could be "easily influenced." He joined the demand for an investigation.

Representative Calder of New York one of the republicans in Col. Mulhall's list of those "who could be influenced"

WILL EXTEND SCOPE OF ANTI-LOBBY LAW

Substitute Amendment to Bill Reported by Senate Committee Includes Members-Elect.

Madison, Wis., July 2.—The substitute amendment for the general anti-lobby bill reported by the senate committee on judiciary for passage extends the provisions of the lobby law to members-elect. The law now applies only to members of the legislature and permits a period of two months between the election and the taking of the oath of office before the members elect may be lobbied without restriction.

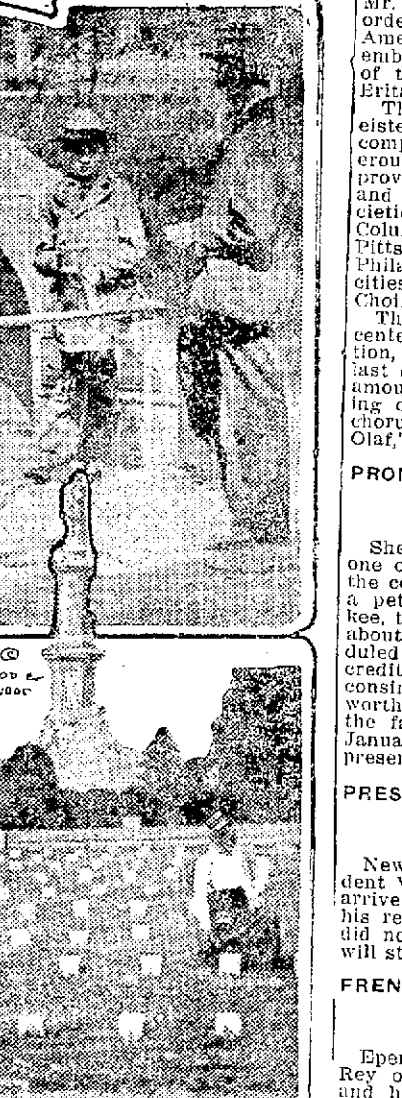

The committee substitute provides that no paid lobbyist shall "attempt personally and directly to influence any member or member-elect of the legislature, upon any subject of legislation, or subjects of legislation, otherwise than the appearing before the regular committees, etc." The change in this provision from the present law is the insertion of the word "members-elect." The new provision is intended to prohibit conducting a campaign upon members between the time of election and the time the legislature convenes.

MANY VETERANS ARE UNABLE TO ENDURE HARDSHIPS OF CAMP

Ranks of Blue and Gray Armies at Gettysburg are Thinned Today, Owing to Ravages of Hot Weather.—Many Return Home.

Gettysburg, July 2.—The tide of invasion turned from Gettysburg today and the armies of the blue and gray began to melt away under the compelling influence of a torrid sun and the ravages of the camp life. General Hunter Leggett, U. S. A., in command of the camp, estimated that more than 6,000 veterans have gone and expressed the opinion that one thousand might depart before midnight. Most of them have loaded over the camp grounds, shaken hands with comrades they knew in other regiments, and left for home.

Regular army men were not sorry to see the thousands depart for the camp has been crowded beyond its capacity and hundreds of old men were being quartered in tents that were made for soldiers, but not for sleeping purposes. Scattered on the ground and although the quarter master had made goodly provisions, the mess tables did not groan with food.

There were no other causes for rejoicing for all indications today were for another unusually warm day. The sun was not over the hill at 40 with before the mercury stood at 90 with the promise of its being much higher.

The veterans have stood the heat wonderfully in the opinion of medical men, but at a time when there is protracted heat scores of prostrations may result.

This was military day and the big tent was presided over by Colonel Andrew Cowan of Louisville, Major General John R. Brooke of Pennsylvania was the northern orator of the day and Sergeant John C. Scarborough of North Carolina, the silver-tongued defender of the south. To Barry Eukler of Washington, D. C., was given the honor of reading Lincoln's address.

Colonel Andrew Cowan of Louisville, Ky., captain of the first New York battery which was stationed at the close of the battle, presided at the principal exercises in the big tent. In introducing Major General John R. Brooke, U. S. A., retired, who spoke for the army, he said that the North Carolina, who voiced the sentiment of the army of Northern Virginia, Col. Cowan said in part:

"Our regiment is honor to the nation. It ought to be twice as large. Our navy has won the admiration of the world, but we ought to build two battleships for every one built by Japan. Our coast cities with their great wealth are exposed to hostile attack. Why should they live in fear?"

"We have become a world power. Whether for good or ill who can say? We must guard our coast cities against invasion. Let us be prepared to command peace."

Colonel Bradley, the army officer in charge of the camp, said he was surprised today when records from all the hospitals under his control were turned in. Only 210 veterans remained in the hospitals over night and the remainder were not suffering from heat prostration but from the ordinary ailments of old age.

Only six men have died in camp since Sunday, a record which has caused the doctors when it is considered that more than 50,000 men are here. Landis L. Glavis, 63 years old, of West Moore, Pa., a member of Cunningham post, No. 97, G. A. R., dropped dead on the street in Gettysburg today.

Who's Who and What's What

An Englishman visiting this country recently commented on the advanced development of our advertising. He said that one result of his advertisement was a remarkably short every of time by an intimate study of the advertising in first-class newspapers.

That may have been expressing it rather strongly, perhaps as a result of his enthusiasm, but it must be apparent to every thoughtful reader that newspaper advertising as it is conducted nowadays possesses an unusual educational value.

We are quite sure that our cousin from a total stranger and, by diligent attention to the advertising appearing daily in this and other good newspapers soon he will be well informed as to the customs and the fashions, where to go for his shopping and his recreation.

Who's who and what's what have a persistent manner of finding their way into the daily newspapers, so that he who reads may profit.

STOLEN JEWELS ARE FOUND IN A VALISE

Gems Valued at $98,000 Taken From New York Store Are Found in Railroad Station.

New York, July 2.—The more than $98,000 worth of jewelry stolen from the Fifty Avenue firm of Eudall and Ballou were found today in the Pennsylvania railroad station in a valise.

Jewels, among them a rare blue diamond of great value, were stolen last Friday night during the excitement caused by a fire in the establishment. No arrests were made but William Beck, a young repair clerk in the store when taken to police headquarters for questioning jumped from a window of the building and fled. He had not been found this morning. The firm appraised its loss at about $98,000. There were 450 pieces in the lot.

William Beck, a clerk who was employed by the Fifty Avenue jewelry firm of Eudall and Ballou and who fled shortly after the firm was robbed last week of $98,000 worth of gems, was arrested today. He is said to have made a confession of his knowledge of the robbery. His arrest followed the recovery today of the stolen gems in a valise at the Pennsylvania station.

HUGE MUSKELLONGE NEARLY KILLS LAD

Wierd Sounding "Fish Story" Comes From Park Falls, Wis., and Is Corroborated by Several.

Marshfield, July 2.—Frank Haas, Jr., of Park Falls, 16 years old came to the office of a Park Falls physician bearing bites on his neck, arms and body which had to be dressed and which the doctor pronounced as inflicted by a fish. Haas's story corroborated by boys who were with him that he was swimming beyond his depth in the Flambeau and a large muskellonge attacked him and tried to drag him under. The tale sounded wierd, but as muskies some times are caught weighing 60 pounds there is no reason to doubt it.

WELL DRESSED BODY OF WOMAN IS FOUND

Discovered to Rear of Store on Madison Street in Chicago.—Robbery Motive is Scouted.

Chicago, Ill., July 2.—The body of a well dressed unidentified woman, thirty-five years old, was found today on the blood-spattered platform in the rear of a store on Madison street. The body was set with a knife wound and nearby was a knife with a blood stained blade three inches long, which gave evidence that the woman had struggled with her assailant.

George Jackson, a watchman in the store, told the police he had seen the woman in the alley back of the place about eleven o'clock last night, but he heard no cries of a struggle later. A teamster found the body and notified the watchman and then disappeared without giving his name. Detectives are searching for him. Police believe the woman was murdered after having been criminally assaulted. They say robbery was not the motive, as her assailant did not remove the locket or gold necklace with a locket. A plain gold ring and a gold ring set with a ruby were also on her hand. The only clue found was a black hat band apparently torn from a man's derby or straw hat.

The woman had been dead about four hours when the body was found.

Andrew Dufrain, 41 years old, night watchman in the Volunteers of America hotel, was taken into custody and questioned by police in connection with the murder. It is said he was seen by a policeman entering the alley several hours before the body was found. The police found numerous scratches on his right arm. He bloody finger prints on the platform have been photographed in an effort to identify the woman's slayer.

The victim was later identified as Mrs. P. Weston, a piano teacher and singer, who appeared in moving picture theatres sometimes being known as Mrs. Mitchell.

APPROPRIATION BILL PASSED IN ASSEMBLY

First of Large Calibre Goes Through With No Noticeable Opposition.—To State Institutions.

Madison, Wis., July 2.—The first of the big appropriation bills, that for the state board of control and the state charitable and penal institutions, passed the assembly today by a vote of 35 to 30. The board is authorized to establish the following bureaus: Vital statistics, sanitary inspection and sanitary engineering, tuberculosis and contagious disease, and public information and education.

The assembly killed the bill by Senator Biecher substituting the Austra-bailot for the caucus system of nominating candidates for town and village officers. The bill was opposed by Assemblyman Judson Haas who declared it was growing more unpopular with rural voters every day. The bill already passed the senate and had been ordered engrossed and sent to third reading in the assembly and its defeat in the lower house came at the last stage in its legislative career. The vote was 35 to 30.

BREACH OF PROMISE ACTION IS SETTLED AT MARQUIS' COST

Costs Marquis of Northampton Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars and Costs to Satisfy Daisy Markham.

London, July 2.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and all the costs of the suit is the price the Marquis of Northampton has agreed to pay to settle the suit for breach of promise brought against him by the actress, Miss Daisy Markham, whose real name is Miss Violet Moss. The costs will amount to a considerable sum on account of the large number of distinguished counsel engaged to plead for the opposing party. The Marquis, better known as Earl Compton, only recently succeeded to the title at the age of twenty-seven. The plaintiff is well known both in America and in the British Isles under her stage name.

The settlement was announced when the case was called in the court of justice for the court room was filled with fashionable women and actresses who had come in anticipation of listening to some interesting evidence. Sir Edward Carson, a former solicitor general, and Edward G. Hemmerde, recorder of the court, and member of parliament with two junior barristers appeared on behalf of Miss Markham, whose suit was in her real name of Miss Violet Moss. On the other side for the Marquis were Henry B. Duke, member of parliament, Fredrick Smith, one of the unionist leaders, and Raymond Asquith, son of the premier, in legal counsel. The case of the legal counsel makes the cost of the suit amount to tens of thousands of dollars. Young Marquis had previously offered $50,000 to settle the case and many people had thought Miss Markham unwisely not to accept the offer. When Miss Markham appeared on proceeding with the suit London gossip anticipated that she had a sensational story to tell and interest in the suit arose accordingly. The damages agreed on today were the largest for many years in a breach of promise case. As soon as the preliminaries had been completed Sir Edward Carson informed the court that a settlement had been reached after a consultation between counsel on both sides.

The vote on passage was 57 to 7.

Another bill by Mr. Mahon which passed the assembly last night provides for a legislative investigation of the subject of occupational diseases and sickness insurance. The vote was 35 to 30.

The Peavey bill, as amended, providing for a reorganization of the state board of health, passed the assembly by a vote of 35 to 30. The board is authorized to establish the following bureaus: Vital statistics, sanitary inspection and sanitary engineering, tuberculosis and contagious disease, and public information and education.

The vote was 35 to 30.

FEW COMPLAINTS OF EARLY CELEBRATING

Janesville Youngsters Wait Until Fourth Before Shooting Crackers.—State Law Stringent.

Few complaints have thus far been received by the police concerning premature celebration of the Fourth of July by youngsters who have been eager to lay in an early supply of firecrackers, fireworks and other noise-making devices usually employed on Independence day. The state law and the city ordinance covering the matter of fireworks are both very strict, carrying heavy penalties. All firecrackers more than three inches long or more than a half inch in diameter come under the ban of the regulation. They shall not contain such powerful explosives as dynamite, nitro-glycerin or gunpowder, the fine for exploding such crackers not conforming with the regulation ranging from $50 to $500 or a jail sentence ranging from 30 days to six months, or both. The state law also forbids the use of rockets or any kind of fireworks containing these dangerous explosives, while the blank cartridges, dynamite cases and similar devices are also under the restriction.

SMOKE CIGARETTES IN SCHOOL CUPOLA

Fire Chief H. C. Klein Makes Investigation at Jefferson School and Finds Dangerous Conditions.

Third ward youngsters who have acquired the cigarette habit and wish to perfect it without being discovered or disturbed by vigilant parents, have found an unusual hiding place in the cupola of the Jefferson school building. The fact was discovered by Chief of the Fire Department H. C. Klein who made an investigation of the building one evening recently.

While this may be a fine harbor of refuge for the youngsters who want to smoke away from all chance of parental interference, it is decidedly dangerous as the fire hazard to the building is considerably increased. The structure itself is by no means fire proof and is certainly no place for careless lads with matches and cigarettes, says Chief Klein, who has taken measures to have the practice stopped. The door of the building was unlocked when the chief made his investigation. Care will be taken to keep the boys out of the building during the summer vacation.

MAYOR JAMES A. FATHERS WRITES FOR "MUNICIPALITY"

Contributes Article on Janesville's New License Zone to June Number of Magazine.

Mayor James A. Fathers contributes an article on "Janesville's New License Zone" to the June number of "The Wisconsin Municipality." The contribution was made at the request of Burt Williams, business manager of the publication and is accompanied by the illustrations of Mayor Fathers and Councilmen R. M. Cummings and C. K. Mitmore. Mayor Fathers explains:

"This zone does not result in opening up new or different licensed territory, but simply throws a limit around territory in which saloons are already in existence. The particular result of this act is to make all parts outside of the zone no-license territory, and confine the carrying on of the business to the downtown business section of the city and puts it on the same basis as other mercantile establishments."

In mentioning her resignation from the Anti-Tuberculosis association, the Crusader, the official organ of that organization, says as follows: "Miss Tate has been connected with the association for nearly three years. She has made a large number of friends throughout the state for herself and for the association."

OBITUARY.

Robert H. Erdman.
After an illness of six weeks, Robert Henry Erdman died at the home of his parents at 1421 Pleasant street last night. Erdman was struck on the ear while playing baseball a year ago and the bruise developed into a dangerous abscess. He was taken to the St. Luke's hospital in Chicago, where the best of medical attention was given him in hopes of saving his life. Four operations failed to stem the injury and on Saturday night he was brought back to his parents' home as there was little hope of his recovery.

Erdman was employed at the Chicago and Northwestern roundhouse and was thought very much of by his fellow workmen. It is a peculiar circumstance that he passed away on his twenty-third birthday. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his parents, a wife and a nine months old baby daughter, and two sisters, Mrs. E. J. Crosby of Deloit, Mrs. J. Page of Chicago Heights and two brothers, John and Edison of this city.

NEW MIKADOS ORDERED FOR FREIGHT SERVICE ON N. W.

A new consignment of the latest and best locomotives that are manufactured by the American Locomotive Works at Schenectady, New York, have been ordered by the Northwestern railroad and they will be distributed throughout the divisions next week. Two of this type of engines were tied up at the Janesville yards last month and were sent out to the Ashland division when the ore season was at its height.

The locomotives are the largest and most powerful freight engines that are used on the Northwestern system and are equipped with market solid back end rods, removable box huses and the flangeless shoe and wedge. At present the local divisions appear to be well stocked with engines and the officials at the yards thought it probable that the new Mikados would be sent to the lines in northern Illinois.

"Carelessness is the Parent of Disaster." Engine 1295, an extra passenger engine, is undergoing extensive repairs at the local shops.

Engineer Sterritt and Fireman Yates are on the night helpers job. Engine number 1585 was sent to Elroy for service on the Northern Wisconsin division.

THE BOND ISSUE.

There appears to be a mistaken idea that if the proposed bond issue of thirty-eight thousand dollars for the construction of the Milwaukee street bridge, is voted down the question as to whether the buildings which lined it before the fire of April 1 can be rebuilt or not will be settled. Generally speaking the public is opposed to the rebuilding of the structures. It is a mistake, however, to believe that this can be accomplished by voting down the bridge bonds. This will only delay the construction of the bridge and not decide the other question at all. In fact, it would be a bad thing for the city to allow the present unsightly ruins to remain any longer than was necessary in their present condition. It hurts the business houses on both sides of the river and even starting by August first, it will be several months before the new bridge can be completed. The question of rebuilding the stores destroyed by the fire, now rests with the governor as to whether action shall be brought by the attorney general in behalf of the state to decide the matter once and for all. Then a second consideration comes into the situation, that of the rights of the United States government relative to the river, and from the letter published some days ago, from one of the government officials, it is evident they are watching over the situation. It would be a mistake to vote down the bond issue hoping thus to prevent the rebuilding of the stores. Janesville needs the bridge and needs it at once, and the bonds should be voted for favorably.

ADVICE FOR BLONDS.

Dr. Rucker, former Milwaukee health officer, now a government official at Washington, has stirred up a hornet's nest in his discussion of the question of blonds or brunettes in hot weather. An exchange takes up the cudgels for the blonds and says: "Taking a cue from other harassed and individually helpless creatures, the blonds should certainly form a protective organization to save themselves from their torturers. Their motto should be: Better to die without advice than to flourish by adopting it."

"Everybody will remember that the blonds came in for much unsought attention several seasons ago—of course it was in the dog days. Bold scientists predicted with confidence the gradual elimination of the blonds from our society, maintaining that blonds couldn't survive so near that fountain of light and heat, the sun, and that, woman for woman, the blonds were far less vital than the brunettes. If the blonds worried as much as the scientists, they didn't show it. And this fact alone proved that their hold on life was slight indeed."

"Now Dr. W. C. Rucker of the public health service returns to the attack, loaded with much invaluable advice. Blonds should avoid the sunlight as much as possible. They should wear colored goggles, hats with orange linings, and white gloves to shed the glare. Their undergarments—which it is suspected women don't really wear at all nowadays—should be orange or blue to protect the skin. Poor, naive Dr. Rucker, how like a scientist he speaks!"

THE PLAYGROUNDS.

Within the next day or two the two public playgrounds are to be officially opened to the children of the city. It is a good movement, started in the right way and if the men and women who have made this possible could watch the interested children already at play on the apparatus erected, they would feel well repaid for the efforts in their behalf.

The use of the grounds are free to all children and directors of play will be in attendance to show them the use of the apparatus and how to enjoy themselves at the various games provided. While the present grounds are located at the Webster and Jefferson school grounds, the children of the whole city are free to use them, and if they prove as successful as they doubtless will, another year will probably see similar grounds installed in all the school grounds of the city.

THE STINK POT.

Newspapers all over the country are discussing most freely the recent disclosures of the alleged grafting, in plain words, of members of congress, as announced in the so-called statement of "Colonel" Mulhall. The Chicago Inter-Ocean calls a spade a spade without fear of consequences and discusses the matter in the following editorial:

"The Chinese are credited with the invention of the stink pot as an effective weapon in sea fights. It consists of an earthen jar filled with powder and other materials of a noxious and suffocating nature. Its destructive powers are considerable compared with the nauseating vapors with which it overcomes a man within range."

"Modern nations make no use of the stink pot in civilized warfare. But the scandal which has been exploited by 'Colonel' Mulhall in Washington illustrates how similar tactics can be employed in political warfare. The bomb prepared by this colonel-of-fortune was crammed with the reputations of scores of the best-known men in public life. Over them all he has poured the stink of suspicion, mixed with innuendo and falsehood. Enough of current gossip and shreds of truth have been added to give the concoction popular interest and a thin air of plausibility."

"Then the bomb was sold to a newspaper for $10,000 to be exploded under the noses of the people on Sunday morning when everybody has time to inhale the stench."

"Except in a few minor details 'Colonel' Mulhall's stink pot will turn out to be a colossal squib. Its source robs it of effectiveness. As the dismissed employee of the association he attacks, his animus is palpable and his use of information claimed to be gained as its agent stamps his story as unworthy of belief."

"As for the reputations 'Colonel' Mulhall assails, some of them did not need the sickening light of his stink pot, but the majority cannot be tarnished by its malignant fumes. The lobbying of the National Association of Manufacturers has been open and aggressive—sometimes too aggressive. It has looked horns with the other great legislative lobby—the labor lobby—and neither apparently has asked nor given quarter."

"Public morals have nothing to fear from public lobbying."

Some wise fellow has doped out the local political situation as follows: Either Fathers, Nash or Nichols will be the next mayor. Well, this is true, but narrow the question down to two, who will be voted on next Tuesday, as Fathers is already nominated, and which do you want as a candidate—Nichols or Nash? That is the real question now and one that will be decided by the voters.

Have you stopped to think that one week from yesterday—Tuesday, July 8th—the primaries will be held and it will be decided whether Nash or Nichols will be the standard-bearer of the small element? Well, the bond issue also to be voted upon there is certain to be a good sized vote out.

The war against the great "white plague" has only just begun and any help that citizens can give the visiting nurse who is making a brave fight to help the unfortunates with but small means will be appreciated.

A Chicago man has accomplished the trick of sailing across Lake Michigan in a "lighter than air" machine in a trifle over an hour for over fifty miles. Talk about your birds flying now.

About this time a few thousand young husbands are looking for the fellow who assured them that it was possible for a married couple to live comfortably and happily on $12 a week.

Beloit invaded Janesville last evening and announced they are ready to entertain fifty thousand people on July fourth and wanted all Janesville to come down and enjoy themselves.

Part of the evidence introduced in the senate lobby investigation again calls attention to the advisability of burning certain kinds of correspondence.

Perpetual peace between this country and Brazil is prophesied. All Brazil will need is one good look at Colonel Roosevelt during his tour of South America.

The Ohio bride who was made deathly sick by chicken salad with pimiento dressing may never again care for salad like mother used to make.

Former Senator Lorimer probably isn't any happier for the knowledge that it cost the Illinois suffragists only $9,000 to win in the legislature.

Probably the insidious lobbyist is the one who doesn't wear a big diamond shirt stud and a massive gold watch chain.

One hideous injustice of the silly season is that everybody can get away with an alibi except a baseball team.

Governor Sulzer of New York has become a better American citizen. He has had a falling out with Tammany.

Henry and His Wives.
"Henry VIII. was king of England and the greatest widower that ever was," states a boy's essay. "He was born at a place called Annie Domino, and he had 350 wives. The first was beheaded and then executed, the second was revoked, and the third died, and then he married Ann Bulletin."—London Lancet.

Horrible!
"Mr. Green's youngest son," said Mrs. Twickembury, "hasn't done a stroke of work for six months. Just living on his father! I'm afraid he's going to be nothing but a parrot."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

A REPUBLICAN OF THE LONG AGO.

Girolamo Savonarola was the John the Baptist of the reformation. He was a republican before the world knew any true republics.

Savonarola preached in the end of the fifteenth century. At the very time Columbus was discovering a new world this Dominican monk was gaining his great hold on Florence. For eight years he was the head of the priory of San Marco and virtual ruler of the city. Yet he never held a secular office and scarcely ever went outside of his pulpit to give his political message.

He found Florence in the hands of the powerful Medici family. Lorenzo the Magnificent was then at the height of his power. The fearless preacher would have none of him, although Lorenzo made advances. Savonarola uttered his denunciation of tyrants, and his description of a tyrant left no one in doubt as to whom he meant. At Lorenzo's death the Dominican friar proved the only safety of the city during the French invasion. People in a fury turned against the younger son of the Medici and drove him from Florence. Then Savonarola became supreme. He announced to the people that Christ was the head of the city and that they should seek no other ruler. He brought back the old republic. He wrote essays on government that are good reading today. He drove out corruption and caused the people to turn from their vanities. The whole city was swept by a religious revival. The fearless preacher was offered the red hat of a cardinal, but refused. He desired to be independent, and his independence at last caused his downfall. In the end he was tortured, hanged, and afterward his body was burned and his ashes scattered in the river, but his influence was felt not only in Florence, but throughout Europe. Luther heard of him before he preached the reformation, and today the name of the fearless Italian preacher has become the synonym for those who combine the political and spiritual vision and in eloquent speech advocate reform and proclaim God's kingdom on earth.

Yet in his early days Savonarola spoke to empty benches in Florence. His congregations dwindled to not more than twenty-five hearers, and it was not until he had gone forth into other parts of Italy and established a name that Florence would hear him at all. Although intensely Christian, this religious and political reformer was no meek saint. He prophesied the sword, and the sword came. He also prophesied a better age, and this also came, but not for Italy.

His voice was perhaps the most eloquent of those that heralded the new dawn that broke over the world in the wonderful era of the renaissance and the reformation.

our present day nuisances were unheard of. Following are a few of the things the people of those times didn't have to stand for:

- Appendicitis.
- Squaking phonographs.
- Reckless automobile drivers.
- Bubbly drinking fountains.
- Lucky fountain pens.
- Whizzy furnaces with tremendous appetites.
- Sawdust breakfast food.
- Peg top trousers with cuffs.
- Yankeeville yodlers.
- Fifty-cent butters.
- Screechowl automobile horns.
- Musical comedies.

This, That and the Other.

This, That and the Other. The Chinese in our town who has worked out and patented a device known as the "noise arrester," which has Maxim's silence beaten by a long mile. This delicate little piece of mechanism is built on the plan of a photograph with a horn attachment and records sound. It is fastened under the floor of a street car and as the car goes bounding along the "arrester" absorbs all of the noise so that a person on the sidewalk cannot hear the car go by. At the end of the line the "arrester" is detached from the car and a fresh one put on. The noise which has been condensed in the car is then carried out to the street and shipment. When the cans are opened pandemonium is let loose and one can of this noise will last about as long as a prehistoric tank full of gas.

This is an open question and many will disagree with the professor, who claims that the inventions of the last forty or fifty years are what makes life bearable.

We don't agree with him and if you think it over you will have to admit that in those good old days a lot of

Let others work and lose their health in piling up the sordid wealth. But that is not my wish. Let others burn the midnight oils Devising ways of grabbing spoils—I'd rather sit and fish.

Let others solve the problems great, Allot the affairs of state; None of that on my dish. Let others hew the nation's path And hear a thankless nation's wrath—I'd rather sit and fish.

Let others lead the strenuous life, That's full of worry, toil and strife, But that's not my ambition. Let others wear their lives away By living five years every day—I'd rather sit and fish.

bigger than a plum. He told, down to a penny, what he had figured it out that the grapes had cost him a piece. The guests looked annoyed. They ate the expensive grapes charily. But Mr. Hale, smiling, extended his plate and said: "Would you mind cutting me off about $1.87 worth more, please."

George Ade at a dinner at the Ritz, in London, said of luck: "Nobody is so dependent on luck as the playwright. When he prospers he considers luck a kindly goddess; but when his work fails then luck seems to him a spirit perversely cruel and mean."

"He regards luck then as Tom Jackson's wife of Lafayette does," Tom Jackson said one morning at breakfast:

"Hang it all! While I was weening I dropped my Imperial Order of Mrs. J. A. Bishin of Elgin, Ill. says: 'I have used Kickapoo Worm Killer for years, and entirely rid my children of worms. I would not be without it.' Medicine Co., Philadelphia and St. Louis. People's Drug Co."

"That night when Jackson sat down to dinner there was his pin beside his plate."

"Bully for you," said he. "Where did you find it, Martha?" "I let Tommy go barefooted this afternoon," said Mrs. Jackson, quietly.

Rid Your Children of Worms
You can change fretful, ill-tempered children into healthy, happy youngsters by ridding them of worms. Tossing, rolling, grinding of teeth, crying out while asleep, accompanied with intense thirst, pains in the stomach and bowels, feverishness and bad breath, are symptoms that indicate worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, expels the worms, regulates the bowels, restores your children to health and happiness.

HAMMOCKS AND SWING COUCHES $2 to $10

Hammock weather is with us again. There's no doubt but a good, big, roomy hammock is just now a possession worth many times more than it costs. To help you cool off after active exercise—to give you comfort and rest—to minimize your worries and cares—we prescribe a hammock. A great many new varieties are here in the very best makes, including the new swinging couches.

"THE ANALYSIS OF MOTION"

This is the most remarkable film we have ever offered, as it is an entirely new development in cinematography. The camera, taking pictures at the almost incredible speed of twelve hundred per second, shows the trajectory of a bullet at a rate of speed reduced so as to enable spectators to witness just what takes place when the bullet leaves the gun, the course it describes through the air, how it strikes, (a clay pipe in one experiment), and exactly what happens when it strikes this target. This film has set the scientists of Europe wondering at its possibilities, and even though it is scientific it keeps within the limits of everyone's understanding by means of clear explanatory titles.

Shown tomorrow only, "The Stolen Papers," by A. Conan Doyle, completing the program.

Here's a woman's program when she buys anything: She opens a handbag, takes out a purse, opens the purse and takes out a coin, shuts the purse and opens the handbag, shuts the handbag and adjusts her veil. COMMISSION MAKES ITS FIRST REPORT

FIRST YEARLY REVIEW OF CITY'S AFFAIRS SHOWS PROGRESS UNDER NEW GOVERNMENT.

FACTS ARE SUFFICIENT

Document About to be Issued is Marked by Conservatism of Statement, But Gives Significant Figures.

David of any tendency toward elaboration and marked by simplicity and directness in the first annual report of the city administration under the commission form of government is nevertheless significant of unusual progress.

This is the first review of the city's affairs which has ever been published in such a degree of completeness, including every department of the city's administration. The report will be issued in pamphlet form during the present week.

The opening statement of the report is brief, covering merely the main points of activity for the past year. Then follow sections devoted to highlighting the progress made, after which come the reports of the various departments, the industrial board of education, a new branch in the city's educational system, the police department, health department, library, nurse's report, inventory of city real estate, statement of receipts and expenditures, and the auditor's report.

Emphasis is placed by the commission on the satisfactory condition of the public health and safety. In this regard they have the following to say:

"The public health and safety have been conserved in a practical, economical manner. The report shows a decidedly economical expenditure of money for the public health and safety, yet under the multiplicity of new laws and regulations being enacted, to govern and control such matters, it will, necessarily, require more funds to carry out to a successful conclusion this great and necessarily vital question.

Generally speaking, the public health condition, being quite free from contagious diseases and with the able assistance of the visiting nurse, the many ailments and disagreeable conditions so apt to obtain in and among school children.

"With the increased cost of living and maintenance of home and family, it becomes a certainty that certain salary increases must be made in some of our departments, viz., the police and fire service and the salaries paid to teachers.

"This conclusion has been reached after careful consideration, keeping in mind that true economy must comprehend the quality of service rendered. It is absolutely essential to the proper operation of a city government that the opportunity of securing the service of those who are the most competent for the positions sought, be secured without question, our next 'budget' must provide for an increase in the scale of wages paid to our school, police and fire departments.

"At present there is a marked improvement in the enforcement of, and a much greater respect for, law and order in Janesville, than has been our previous privilege to enjoy and we now have as well as a decently a regulated city as any in the state. An honest, uniform and intelligent respect to regulation is given and this fact is fairly and candidly acknowledged by all. It has been demonstrated that a sound, active, moral influence can be brought to bear on the good and welfare of everyone concerned."

In regard to street improvements the council offers the following commendation:

"The council has been conservative in the matter of permanent street improvement, believing that the best interests of all concerned, lies in the fact of not 'overdoing' in matter of permanent street improvement, but to do all that we possibly can with the money available for such purposes, keeping in mind a reasonable tax rate and always keeping in view the necessity of the permanent improvement of the main highways leading in and out of the city—for over these particularly highways, we must expect to receive mercantile and industrial benefit. Therefore, we believe that the taxpayer prefers a reasonably low tax rate rather than a 'plunging' into a too rapid accomplishment beyond the city's warranted ability to care for its proportionate share of the proposed improvements.

"In conformity with the principle of conservatism, improving the main highways leading into the city—North Washington street—has been thus improved and in a manner which renders it a credit to the city.

"This particular highway is expected to produce a net of high grade street work with an economical expenditure. Permanent work on Milwaukee avenue, Jefferson avenue and Division street will soon be completed.

"Permanent cement sidewalks and curb and gutters are being constructed where necessary directly and in the interest of the public demands."

The facts presented in the department reports have received attention from time to time in the columns of this paper and do not need republication at this time. It is well to call attention, however, to the uniformly flourishing condition of the various administrative branches. Citizens will find interesting reading in this review of the year which is indicative of the city's progress and prosperity.

PASTOR RUSSELL IN CITY THIS MORNING

Pastor Russell With International Bible Students Passes Through Janesville on Special Train.

A special train of eleven coaches bearing Pastor Russell and two hundred and forty International Bible students passed through this morning at shortly after nine, enroute from Rockford to Madison. The Bible students have started on a eight thousand mile tour through the west and the Rockford ministers hearing that Pastor Russell was in Madison sent him a special invitation to speak at Harlem park. He gave his address to a large audience last night.

The students represent twenty-six states and five Canadian provinces and are taking a vacation trip with Pastor Russell visiting such cities as St. Paul, Winnipeg, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, El Paso, St. Louis and returning to Chicago.

The special train to Rockford was sent over the Northwestern line by way of Footville and Afton and there was a special train of immigrants passing over the main line from Chicago to Winnipeg.

The Daily Novelette IN MID-ATLANTIC. Christopher Columbus, Sailed the ocean over—He sailed the sea! And every man Knew he was a hero.

In the well-known year of 1492 Christopher Columbus stood leaning over the rail of the good ship Isabella. (See Petrarch Googly's "Columbus the Gem of the Ocean.") Suddenly, with just the suspicion of a splash, a thought struck him.

"Hi! Spagetto! Rudolph! Giovan! Gar! Lick!" he cried. And soon his trusted officers were gathered about him. (See Riffery "Skins" "The Christian Names of Columbus' Crew.")

"What? What?" they chorused excitedly. "Spagetto non londo, nix!" ("You don't spy land, do you?")

"A thought has struck me," explained Christopher. "Lissenzo." ("Listen!") "I'll tell it to you. It's a good one!" (See Antonio Spavini's "Columbus' Table Talk and Ready Repartee.")

The officers crowded forward expectantly.

"I was just thinking," said the great discoverer, with a sly Italian smile, "I was just thinking, that if we found the earth to be flat instead of round after all, where do we get off?"

The officers, after laughing politely, made a note of it, and this is said to be the origin of the slang phrase, "Where do I get off?" etc.

Remove Stumps: Supt. W. E. Burget of the Cleary-White Construction company, which has charge of the rebuilding the upper railroad bridge, had his workmen remove the elevated piers that stretched across Rockford just above the railroad bridge. The piers have always been a source of danger to the tugs and Mr. Burget's act will be appreciated. They were pulled out with the big jacking derrick of the Northwestern railroad.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

"THE only way to have a friend is to be one." There is hardly anyone outside my immediate family whose presence or absence means much to me. I heard a man say the other day, "The people who want to be friends with me have to seek me out; I don't bother much with them."

He said it proudly. He evidently thought he was showing how superior he was. I think he should have said it sadly, because he was acknowledging a lack in himself.

It is a common idea—this notion that one is fortunate when one receives more love than one gives. A great many people seem to take pride in realizing that this or that makes a woman proud of having excited a love which she cannot return, and ashamed of loving when she is not loved. And it is just as wrong and cheap a conception of the great force of love.

The love a human being can feel is a far better measure of his character than the love he can excite. It is more blessed to give than to receive. It is as true of love and friendship as of any material gift. It is blessed to have a friend; it is far more blessed to be one.

Like mercy, friendship is twice blessed; it blesses him that gives and him that takes. But contrary to the common belief, it is he that gives who gets the most out of it.

It is, of course, a legitimate reason for pleasure and pride to know that one is the object of another human being's admiration, respect, affection and what-ever other feelings go to make up the wonderful sentiment of friendship.

But on the other hand it is an even greater reason for pride to know that one is sufficiently capable of recognizing and appreciating another human being's value to feel that wonderful sentiment of friendship.

The fewer people a man cares about, the fewer people there are who can hurt him, argues the man who is proud that there are few people who count with him.

True, and the fewer who can make him happy, the fewer who can stimulate and inspire him, and generally help him to expand into his highest self, as the true friend will.

It is as foolish for a man to rejoice that he cares for very few people as it would be for a tree to be glad that it had few roots.

Moreover, the self-sufficient man is sure to be the self-centered man. It is only through realizing our need of others that we understand their need of us.

Don't be afraid to love. And by love I mean love in the bigger sense in which it includes friendship and all kinds of love, as well as the love between the sexes. It may bring you some of suffering, but it will bring you infinitely more of happiness.

Don't be ashamed to love. He who loves most has the most reason to be proud.

none unless you will patiently learn how to cook him.

A preservative bottle of the finest porcelain is the best, but if you have nothing but an earthen pitcher it will do, with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nice and washed and mended with the requisite number of buttons and strings nicely sewed on.

Put him in the kettle by a strong sifter, curd called comfort; duty is apt to be weak. Husbands are apt to fly out of the kettle and be burned and crusty on the edges, since, like crabs and lobsters, you have to cook them while alive. Make a clear, steady fire out of love, neatness and cheerfulness. Set your husband as near this as seems to agree with him.

"If he sputters and fizzes, do not be anxious. Some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of what perfectionists call kisses but no vinegar or pepper of any account.

A little spice improves him, but it must be used with judgment. Stir him gently; watch the white lest he be too flat and close to the kettle and so become useless. You can not tell to know when he is done. If thus treated, he will be nicely with you and the children and he will live as long as you want, unless you become careless and set him in too cold a place."

The above was written on the fly leaf of a Kansas cook book, which was compiled and arranged by the women of the Baptist church of their city and sent to me recently. I am taking the liberty of passing some of the best ones on to our readers.

Boil medium-sized beets until tender; slice; add a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful sugar and one-half cup vinegar; allow to stand a few hours; drain off the vinegar and use it in making a mayonnaise. Take one cupful cooked peas and of chopped cauliflower (cooked). Place lettuce leaves on small plates; on each leaf put a slice of beet, then the peas and cauliflower; place shredded lettuce leaves around; pour the red mayonnaise over the vegetables and garnish with small red radishes.

Mayonnaise Dressing Without Oil. Mix the yolks of three eggs with two teaspoonfuls of salt, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of mustard and one-half a tablespoonful of paprika; beat well, then add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a cupful of hot vinegar and one cupful of three eggs, beaten stiff. Cook over hot water, stirring continually until of the consistency of soft custard. Keep in a glass can, and this dressing will be good for several weeks.

Cream Biscuits. Two cups sifted flour, two-thirds cup soft cream, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful sugar and a little salt; mix four, sugar, salt and baking powder together; then add cream and one well-beaten egg. Bake in hot oven ten minutes.

Sift two teaspoonfuls baking powder and a pinch of salt with the whites; cups flour; enough sweet cream to make a soft dough; cut and bake quickly in hot oven.

Use four ounces of the white meat of chicken and four ounces of boiled beef tongue; grind or chop together until very fine; add salt and pepper, two tablespoonfuls of tery salt, pinch of cayenne and enough mayonnaise to form a smooth paste. Take a few crisp lettuce leaves, dip each leaf in a little tarragon vinegar, shake it and place on a slice of bread; spread a layer of meat over the lettuce; cover this with another lettuce leaf; add another slice of bread, press together and serve.

IF THOU art worn and hard with sorrows that thou wouldst forget; If thou wouldst read a lesson that will keep Thy heart from fainting and thy soul from sleep;

MEAT SUBSTITUTES.

Beans of different kinds are rich foods and may be made into most palatable dishes. Soak a pint of lima beans over night in cold water to cover. Drain and cook in boiling salted water until soft. Again drain and dry in a towel, then saute in butter until brown. Turn into a hot serving dish and pour over one and a half cups of tomato sauce. Cook a quart can of tomatoes with two slices of onion, eight pepper corns and a bit of bay leaf fifteen minutes, then rub through a puree strainer. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually until well blended, the tomato; bring to the boiling point, and if the tomatoes are very acid add a pinch of soda. Season to taste.

Eggs in all combination are good for a hearty dish, and when combined with rice or macaroni are well balanced food. Add five or six hard cooked eggs, with a flavoring of cheese, to two cupfuls of cold cooked macaroni; butter the baking dish and put the macaroni and egg in layers; add sufficient white sauce and seasoning, and cover with buttered crumbs and bake. A bit of onion juice improves the dish.

Macaroni and cheese is another favorite dish. Rice and cheese and fresh mushrooms are most delicious.

People are beginning to put more study on mushrooms and learn a few varieties on which they may depend.

In the using of mushrooms "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing," so be sure you're right, then go ahead.

Creamed mushrooms in timbale cases or in the crostades, which are so pretty made of bread, are another good dish to depend on. Nuts of all kinds in salads and made in the form of a loaf with bread crumbs, egg and seasonings and baked, are most appetizing.

Things Worth Knowing. If clothespins, when new, are plugged into boiling water for a few moments there will be less danger of their splitting when used.

Care of Window Screens—Take out occasionally, brush off all dust, repair any breaks, then brush over both sides with kerosene. It cleans the wires of all dust and grease, prevents rusting and proves very disagreeable to flies and mosquitoes.

To clean mirrors which have that smoky look, a cloth dipped in alcohol is splendid. Very little alcohol is required, and the mirror should be rubbed lightly and quickly.

For creaming butter, or butter and sugar, a perforated spoon will be found best.

Marble Cake—This is made in separate batters. A dark one and a light one. For the dark one, take one-half cup of butter; one cup of sugar; two cups of flour; one teaspoonful baking powder; the yolks of four eggs; one-half cup of milk; one tablespoonful of extract of cinnamon; cloves and allspice. For the light one, take one-half cup of butter; one cup of white sugar; two cups flour; one teaspoonful of baking powder; whites of four eggs; one-half cup of milk; one teaspoonful extract of lemon. Both batters are made by rubbing the butter and sugar a few minutes, then add the flour sifted with the powder, add extract and milk, and mix to a smooth batter rather firm. Have a paper-lined tin; with a spoon drop the batter alternately into it, and bake in a rather quick oven thirty-five minutes.

Caramel Icing—Two cups light brown sugar, one cup of milk; one-half cup butter. Boil until it forms a soft ball in cold water; remove and beat until creamy, and thick enough to spread.

White Icing—One cup of granulated sugar; scant half cup hot water; one tablespoonful of vinegar. Boil until it threads from spoon. Stir in the beaten white of egg and beat thoroughly.

Fig Bread—Two cupfuls of bread dough, one pound of seeded raisins, six ounces of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one pound of sugar, three cupfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, one pound of figs, spices to taste. When the bread dough has risen take two cupfuls of it and put it into a bowl. Add the sugar, butter, milk and spices. Sift together the flour, yeast, powder and salt; add them with the raisins and figs cut into small pieces. Divide into buttered bread pans and allow to rise. Bake until ready. This fig bread is delicious.

BABY'S AWFUL ECZEMA CURED

Face Just a Sore. Scratched Till it Bled. Resinol Stopped Itching

Almost Instantly. Soon Well.

May 20, 1913: "My baby's face broke out with eczema. We tried many prescriptions, ointments, and lotions, but the baby's face kept getting worse all the time. He would scratch it until it would bleed, and finally his face on both sides was just an awful sore. It bothered him so much that he could not sleep much at night."

I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment and used them according to directions. The result was something wonderful. The itching stopped almost instantly, and from the first application we could see a marked improvement. I then bought a fifty-cent jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap, and by the time the jar of Ointment was used the baby's face was almost entirely cured, so I bought another jar and used only half of it, and the cure was complete. My doctor recommends Resinol very highly, and I cannot say too much for Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment." (Signed S. L. Carter, Salem, Va.)

Physicians have prescribed Resinol for eighteen years and every druggist in the country sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. For samples write to Dept. 24, Resinol Baltimore, Md.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Isn't it generally thought that we Southern people get our dialect from the negro way of speaking?

On the contrary, it is claimed that the negro acquired his manner of speaking from the white people. The letter "r" is dropped by many natives of our Eastern states and almost eliminated in England.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it proper for boys and girls friends to exchange rings? (2) I am a girl of seventeen and in love with a man for five years old. He is very homely, is he too old for me? Do you think I am not handsome? (3) My brother, who is thirty, is engaged to a girl fifteen years old. Don't you think she is too young for him? (4) How is my writing?

IGNORANT. (1) It is not wise, as one may lose a ring. Besides, it is not to give a wrong idea to people who might think they are engaged to be married. (2) He is much too old for you. You would get tired of him if he married you, not because of his looks, but because you would be wanting some body younger and livelier about you. (3) She is much too young for him. (4) Fair.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of seventeen. (1) My mother and I have been together for some years in me going to school until I finish or stop and go to work? I'm anxious to finish school, but I'm about to lose interest in it. Won't you please tell me how to regain it? (2) As I'm old enough to have boy friends and don't know how to enter them, please tell me something that will interest them. I'm so small Camille de Verlac says: "Had anyone told me such wonderful results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. My arms and hands were covered with tan and freckles; my neck was dark and discolored from the use of high collars. All these defects were obliterated by one application of a free prescription, which I am pleased to give to anyone. It's just as simple as it is effective. Go to any drug store and get a one-ounce bottle of Kulu Compound. Pour the entire contents into a two-ounce bottle, add one quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Prepare this prescription at your own home. Apply night and morning. It makes the skin soft and beautiful, no matter how rough and red it may be. One application will delight you. I have given this prescription to thousands of women and they are all just as enthusiastic as I am. Try it on your face, neck and shoulders, and you will be agreeably surprised. It is deliciously cool and soothing and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off." Advertisement.

MILITARY WIRELESS CORPS VISITS CITY

Twelve Officers and Cadets from Northwestern Military Academy

Traveling in Automobiles.

Twelve officers and cadets from the Northwestern Military Academy comprising a complete army wireless telegraph signal corps motored into Janesville this morning in three automobiles. They were on the home stretch of a two weeks' trip through Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and according to Col. R. P. Davidson in charge of the party, had been picking out the best possible roads between Minneapolis and their destination, Highland Park, Illinois. Headquarters have been established at Lake Geneva, where property has been purchased, and the school will be moved. Building may be started this summer.

The present trip took the party from Lake Geneva to Chicago, Rock Island, Des Moines, through Northwestern Iowa and eastern Minnesota to Minneapolis. A year ago the same, or a similar party, made a seven weeks' jaunt through the east, including the little traveled roads of the Cumberland mountains, and three years ago they took part in the children tour through Texas, two of their machines being in the line to finish the trip with the original engines.

Two of the machines are equipped with complete wireless telegraph apparatus and rapid fire guns capable of firing 480 shots a minute. The third carries a balloon-destroyer gun mounted on a swivel that permits it being directed at any angle. On tests from fixed stations the instruments have shown a range of 125 miles. The government field sets only have a range of about thirty-five miles. The latter is used in the laboratory operated by the engines is used to fill storage battery which operates the headlights and searchlights and also to run a motor that operates a 170 volt alternating current dynamo. Current from the latter is used to operate the transmitting apparatus of the one-half kilowatt wireless outfit. The collapsible steel masts carried can be extended at feet. These were invented at the academy, as were also the gun-mounts, both of which have been adopted in the United States army. Neither have been patented. The gun-mount is designed with a view to elevate the searchlight. The searchlights are equipped with what is known as the heliograph shutter which makes it possible to send code messages as with the regular heliograph. This method of transmission has proved successful over distances of eighteen to twenty miles on the shore of Lake Michigan. The searchlights turn with the guns so that shots can be accurately directed at night.

The purpose of this and former trips made by the wireless corps is to determine practicability of the military automobile for use in the United States, and also to test the utility of the wireless telegraph for field service. Steady progress is being made in both lines of endeavor. Two years ago the wireless apparatus shook all to pieces with the vibration. This year all parts were carefully cushioned from vibration and no trouble was experienced with the apparatus. The wireless telegraph was run on roads as nearly parallel as possible and at intervals they would stop, erect their masts, and get into communication with each other. Thirty miles was the greatest interval at which the apparatus was operated this trip. The wireless telegraph and guns on each machine weigh about 700 pounds. All of the machines were Cadillac's. Two broken springs was the only trouble experienced this trip.

The members of the party were Col. R. P. Davidson, Captain Cananea, chief of wireless instruction at the academy, First Sergeant Johnston, Sergeant's Caynes, Porch, McDowell, Corporals Bernstein and Cobb.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE ORCHESTRA

(By Howard L. Rann.)

The orchestra is a collection of willing, intrepid performers who are hired for the week and can give a program fully that long without experiencing the least inconvenience.

Owing to the fact that the people of this country would rather hear the feverish strata of the stock ticker and the languorous voice of the coupon bond than sit down in some red plush upholstered and listen to several reams of contrapuntal ecstasy very few orchestras are able to keep alive without being bolstered up by the idle rich. If it were not for rich people who love music and buy orchestra stock without trying to squeeze dividends out of a Greig concerto, you could count on the third finger of the right hand the number of people who could tell the Peer Gynt suite from a sale of bed room furniture.

The orchestra cannot be trusted to play alone, but has to be led by somebody who can read notes and keep the finger of the right hand the number of people who could tell the Peer Gynt suite from a sale of bed room furniture. As a rule, the orchestra tackles the most severe grade of classical music. It can wrap itself around, which causes large numbers of thirty enthusiasts who buy season tickets because they are cheaper by the yard to persevere with great earnestness. Occasionally the orchestra will throw in a popular concert and outrage the musical sensibilities of the elect by perching the Blue Danube waltz, but this is not at all a happy event.

The orchestra sallies forth every spring and accompanies the volunteer college chorus while it assaults some inoffensive cantata. This is good even to several kinds of time which it never met before.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Detective William J. Burns, in Which Robert Hilliard is Appearing !!

Copyright, 1912, by Journal-American-Examining.

"You can't frighten me with that!" She whirled upon him furiously. "I had nothing to do with it. You know it! You know who did it! You want me to make a confession to hang him with, and I won't do it! I won't do it!"

Kayton opened the door of an anteroom as the telephone buzz sounded. "Wait here a little," he said gently. "I may need you presently, even if you are unwilling to help me."

Manager Leischmann on the telephone announced some important arrivals in the outer office—Mr. Hurley, Miss Mazurek and Bruce, Mrs. Wyatt and Miss Thompson. The last party was the first received, and after a happy reunion and much excited explanation Kayton bundled them into one of the consultation rooms that opened off his sanctum, obtained a few necessities from Manning, who was in the outer office, and then he was ready for the lawyer.

As for that worthy, he did not enter with his wonted manner of pushing everything out of the way. He was almost reluctant, and his eyes were troubled. Kayton apparently noticed nothing of this, and his greeting was as cordial as ever.

"Well, I'm very busy this morning," Mr. Kayton, he replied, in response to the detective's inquiry as to how he did. "But I wanted to oblige you. What was the case?" he inquired.

He did not settle himself comfortably in a chair and light a cigar. He remained standing above the desk.

Kayton was busy with his papers, some of which partly concealed the metal contents of a little pasteboard box.

"It's a little better than a case," he replied at last cheerfully, looking up. "I think we've got the man that killed Argyle."

Mr. Hurley was paler than usual, and any one looking for signs would have noticed that more of the scant color left his face.

"Well, well," he began slowly. "Sit down, and I'll tell you," replied Kayton lightly. The lawyer slowly sank into the chair, never taking his eyes off Kayton's face. The latter, swinging his chair around so as to directly face his visitor.

"Mr. Hurley," he inquired pleasantly, "did you ever try a lawsuit?" Mr. Hurley started and stammered slightly as he answered:

"I'm—er—I'm an office lawyer."

"Oh!" murmured Kayton. He eyed the lawyer, and the lawyer stirred uneasily.

"Mr. Hurley," asked the detective quickly, "when did it first occur to you that Mr. Argyle was out of his mind?"

Mr. Hurley raised his eyes and met the detective's squarely.

"I don't get you," he said slowly. "You will," was the grim assurance. "You surely didn't think you'd interest a man in his position—a millionaire—in a scheme for promoting counterfeiting if he was in his right mind?"

Mr. Hurley was silent for a moment, but he no longer looked disconcerted. He knew now why he had been brought to Kayton's office. He gripped himself to fight for his life.

"Any business affairs that Mr. Argyle intrusted to me were private and confidential," he said, very deliberately. "I can't discuss them. Mr. Kayton, you forget that I am a lawyer."

"I don't forget it—I don't believe it," retorted Kayton.

Mr. Hurley achieved an excellent appearance of righteousness and suppressed. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

Kayton finished him the last page of the fake confession.

"Do you know that signature?" he inquired. With a hand that trembled not the slightest the lawyer adjusted his eyeglasses and studied the document.

"As you saw in the morning papers," continued Kayton grimly, "before you packed your bag, we arrested your friends last night and confiscated all their counterfeit money—all except the $100 bill that had been left with Mr. Argyle. I advised Mrs. Martin to do what she could for herself by making a complete statement of the facts as she knew them, and you'll be sorry to hear that her confession of what occurred between you and Mr. Argyle in the library that night charges you with murder."

As if he had paid but scant attention to Kayton's words, the lawyer tossed the paper back on to the desk.

"It's a lie!" he said coolly. "That's all a fake—to protect herself."

"Then you mean to say that Mrs. Martin was responsible for the death of Mr. Argyle?" demanded Kayton swiftly.

"That's exactly what I mean to say," returned Mr. Hurley. "I had no connection with these people whatever, except professionally for Mr. Argyle. I was retained by him"—he hesitated.

"For what purpose?" demanded Kayton.

"For a perfectly legitimate purpose," replied the lawyer. "This woman thought she had a claim on Mr. Argyle—she was trying to get money."

"Claim?" interrupted Kayton. "What sort of a claim?"

"I don't know."

CHAPTER XV.

The Case Is Cleaned Up.

KAYTON laughed—a short, unpleasant laugh—and stepped quickly to the anteroom door. "Mrs. Martin," he called, "I'll have to trouble you to come in here again."

In obedience to the summons the woman slowly entered the office and paused when she saw Hurley. Before they could more than exchange glances Kayton said abruptly:

"Mrs. Martin, Mr. Hurley has just said that you murdered Mr. Argyle in an attempt to obtain money from him."

"What?" she gasped, and Hurley winced for the first time before her blazing eyes. "You, you!" Then she pointed her finger at him and turned to Kayton.

"It's a lie," she said with quiet intensity. "He killed him!"

"I believe you," exclaimed Kayton, with a grim heartiness and a passing gleam of triumph in his gray eyes.

But Mr. Hurley was not beaten yet. "Mr. Kayton," he said contemptuously, "there's nothing whatever to connect me with the murder, and you know it."

"Oh, yes, there is!" Kayton contradicted him and there was a new and nasty ring in his voice. "There are several things. You came to my office to ask about that 'N. M.' person and then immediately tipped off Mrs. Martin."

"All in my professional capacity," declared the lawyer doggedly.

"As a counterfeiter?" inquired Kayton, with light scorn.

"As a lawyer."

Kayton leaned toward him and his eyes snapped.

"It was as a lawyer, then, that you advised Kreiser last night to cease the practice of his profession until conditions were safer—for counterfeiting?"

The last vestige of color left the man's face, and Kayton could see that his forehead was moist.

"I don't recollect having given any such advice," he declared. He tried to maintain the contemptuous note, but there was a sudden hoarseness that he could not control.

"I was afraid you wouldn't," said Kayton grimly, picking up the sheet of typewritten dictation notes. "That's why I reminded you." He glanced at one of the pages. "It was as a lawyer, I suppose, that you exclaimed, 'This is a plant' when you heard that I had put Miss Mazurek in the house?"

As a lawyer, you laughed and said, 'So he's using us to throw the real criminals off their guard?' As a lawyer, you concealed from me that Mrs. Martin had a claim on Mr. Argyle. As a lawyer, you persuaded her to go to Mr. Argyle the night of his death to use her influence for your own purposes?"

Mr. Hurley wiped his forehead with his handkerchief and crushed it in his hand.

"You can't bluff me with any frame-up story of this sort!" he rasped out in a hoarse voice.

Kayton gazed at him a moment and then dropped the papers on the desk.

"Well, Hurley," he said disgustedly, "you can go to the devil your own way. If you haven't sense enough to see that it's better to make a clean breast of it and stand for a charge of manslaughter you can go to the chair as a counterfeiting crook that tried to blackmail an old man and murdered him when he rounded on you! You're under arrest, and the charge is murder in the first degree!" He picked up the telephone as Hurley made a gesture to restrain him. "All right, Leisch," he said.

"Just a minute, Mr. Kayton!" "You're just a minute too late," retorted the detective. "Here, boys," he went on, as a couple of his men appeared at the door. "Take this fellow away with you."

The next instant the handcuffs were on his wrists and the officers were searching his pockets. But he hardly noticed them. His face had suddenly grown haggard, his eyes dull with despair.

"Before God, Kayton!" he began, despairingly, "I tell you it was an accident! He'd gone into that counterfeiting, and all of a sudden he shifted and threatened to show me up. I took her there to use her influence to try to square it, and he tried to shoot me!"

"You knew all along that the man wasn't sane!" cut in Kayton mercilessly.

"I—I knew he was queer," stammered Hurley, now eager to admit anything that might bring a gleam of mercy to the hard, cold eyes that gazed into his. "But—but—"

Kayton's mouth shut grimly. "Better save that defense for the jury."

"But I tell you—the tortured man's voice rose almost to a scream—I tell you he'd have shot me! As soon as he heard who she was he pulled that gun, and I knocked it out of his hand and he tried to strangle me. I didn't want to hurt him. I just beat him off, trying to defend myself, and the first thing we knew he was dead on our hands!"

"I don't want to hear your troubles, Hurley," said Kayton coldly, sitting at his desk once more. "Tell them to the district attorney. Go on, boys! Take these apologies along with you."

And, still struggling, pleading, abject and terrified, he was dragged out of the office.

Kayton heaved a long, deep sigh, shook his head and turned to Mrs. Martin, who had drawn back against the wall while the terrible scene was enacted.

"Mrs. Martin," he said as gently as if he had never been inflexible in his life. "I suppose you would like to take care of Dr. Kreiser!"

Instantly her whole manner and expression softened wonderfully, and her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, yes, yes!" she exclaimed, coming eagerly toward him. "If I only could!"

Kayton nodded sympathetically. "I'll send some one with you as soon as I can," he said, "and arrange that you'll only be detained as a witness." He interrupted himself to send for Miss Mazurek and went on: "I'll see you in about a half hour, Mrs. Martin, and I want to talk the case over with you."

"Well, Hurley," he said disgustedly, "you can go to the devil your own way. If you haven't sense enough to see that it's better to make a clean breast of it and stand for a charge of manslaughter you can go to the chair as a counterfeiting crook that tried to blackmail an old man and murdered him when he rounded on you! If you haven't sense enough to see that it's better to make a clean breast of it and stand for a charge of manslaughter you can go to the chair as a counterfeiting crook that tried to blackmail an old man and murdered him when he rounded on you! You're under arrest, and the charge is murder in the first degree!" He picked up the telephone as Hurley made a gesture to restrain him. "All right, Leisch," he said.

"Just a minute, Mr. Kayton!" "You're just a minute too late," retorted the detective. "Here, boys," he went on, as a couple of his men appeared at the door. "Take this fellow away with you."

The next instant the handcuffs were on his wrists and the officers were searching his pockets. But he hardly noticed them. His face had suddenly grown haggard, his eyes dull with despair.

"Before God, Kayton!" he began, despairingly, "I tell you it was an accident! He'd gone into that counterfeiting, and all of a sudden he shifted and threatened to show me up. I took her there to use her influence to try to square it, and he tried to shoot me!"

"You knew all along that the man wasn't sane!" cut in Kayton mercilessly.

"I—I knew he was queer," stammered Hurley, now eager to admit anything that might bring a gleam of mercy to the hard, cold eyes that gazed into his. "But—but—"

Kayton's mouth shut grimly. "Better save that defense for the jury."

"But I tell you—the tortured man's voice rose almost to a scream—I tell you he'd have shot me! As soon as he heard who she was he pulled that gun, and I knocked it out of his hand and he tried to strangle me. I didn't want to hurt him. I just beat him off, trying to defend myself, and the first thing we knew he was dead on our hands!"

"I don't want to hear your troubles, Hurley," said Kayton coldly, sitting at his desk once more. "Tell them to the district attorney. Go on, boys! Take these apologies along with you."

And, still struggling, pleading, abject and terrified, he was dragged out of the office.

Kayton heaved a long, deep sigh, shook his head and turned to Mrs. Martin, who had drawn back against the wall while the terrible scene was enacted.

"Mrs. Martin," he said as gently as if he had never been inflexible in his life. "I suppose you would like to take care of Dr. Kreiser!"

Instantly her whole manner and expression softened wonderfully, and her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, yes, yes!" she exclaimed, coming eagerly toward him. "If I only could!"

Kayton nodded sympathetically. "I'll send some one with you as soon as I can," he said, "and arrange that you'll only be detained as a witness." He interrupted himself to send for Miss Mazurek and went on: "I'll see you in about a half hour, Mrs. Martin, and I want to talk the case over with you."

"Well, Hurley," he said disgustedly, "you can go to the devil your own way. If you haven't sense enough to see that it's better to make a clean breast of it and stand for a charge of manslaughter you can go to the chair as a counterfeiting crook that tried to blackmail an old man and murdered him when he rounded on you! FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 2, 1873.—Groceryman Nash's delivery horse, named "Clyde," was in a fair wagon and David Lowery yesterday afternoon, throwing Mr. Lowery out on Court street, fracturing and dislocating his right shoulder. A boy whom Lowery told to hold the horse while he did some work in the wagon, failed to perform his duty and hence the accident.

M. M. Phelps's young son, while attending a picnic at Clear Lake Saturday afternoon fell and dislocated his elbow.

James Rooney, a machinist, employed at the Harlow works, caught his arm in the belts yesterday, but escaped with severe bruises.

An unknown, unintelligent German appeared on West Milwaukee street yesterday with his face covered with blood, flowing from his many wounds. He was going very slowly to the doctor's office where a repairing process was instituted when he came forth patched and sewed and is in a fair way to recover his wonted beauty. The sufferer had been insisting upon his rights in Harvey's saloon, near the depot, and had met opposition in the form of a tumbler thrown at his head, following a vigorous cuticle removing treatment. Inasmuch as the Harveys have no right to sell liquor it would be well to inquire what other uses they made of tumblers and if those missiles are necessary for household protection.

Edward Hill who has been for years the faithful watchman on Main and East Milwaukee street has given up his position with the intention of removing to Atlanta Georgia, where he will engage in the hotel business. Officer Parker succeeds him as watchman. His long service as a promoter of public peace assures us that his duties will be faithfully attended to.
